MR. LINCOLN.

An Incident Ithustrative of His Kindness "Speaking of Mr Lincoln's kindness of heart," said an old Massachusetts man recently to a representative of the Chicago Inter Ocean, "I will never forget the only time that I exchanged words with him This was in the summer of 1864, and our regiment was stationed temporarily near Washington One day I strolled into the ground between the White House and the river, and threw myself flat on my back under the trees. I was in a dis-consolate frame of mind, as the weight of the war at that time was very heavy of the war at that time was very heavy upon me I lay there for some time, absorbed in my own thoughts and looking up at the fragments of blue sky seen through the leaves of the trees I heard some persons approach, heard them sit down op one of the benches near, and I turped my head carclessly to see who the intruders were I saw at a glance that my victors were President Lincoln and his wife I spring to my feet, gave a military salute and started away. The President returned the salute with an awkward sweep of his long, uhgainly arm, and said. 'Don't go. What is awkward sweep of his long, the gainly arm, and said. Don't go. What is your regiment?' When I had told him that I belonged to the Fitteenth Massachusetts, and had answered some other questions as to what service I had seen, he asked. "Are you going to re-enlist?" I said. 'No, not immediately. I want to go home in time to nately, I want to go home in time to vote for your re-election. He smalled, turned to Mrs Lincoln and said in oldfashioned kindness There, mother, you see, that's the way all my boys feel Then he turned to me and said with tender seriousness I am very glad to know that the soldiers who have done such bard work in the field feel that way. We all are bearing our buildens in this war, and I only hope buttens in this war, and I only nope that I may bear mine as patiently and hopefully as do the boys who carry the rifles. Then he shook my hand and said 'Good-by,' and after I had stepped away some eight or ten feet laised again his long arm and gave another military salute, with a smile on his face that will stay with me on his face that will stay with me through all my life. It was a little thing, but do you know that a thous and times, asleep and awake, tha smile has come to me, and whenever i -Tannic Elza, a nittle daughter of Benjamin Elza, colored, of Weston, W. Va, was for infteen days the subject of a strange maindy From about the third day of June until the 17th she had not exten a single moisel of food, and took nothing except now and then a drink of water. During this interval she was not confined to bed by illness, and in the day time would walk around as usual. On the fifteen day her appeted apparently returned. The first thing she called for was cheese and since that time she has eaten as heartily as anybody. Her fast of three hundred and sixty hours has not affected her seriously. About four years ugo the little girl diank some lie water, and since then, at times, she has not been able to eat, but never before for so long

LECTURE TO NIGHT. Hon John B Finch will aldress the open meeting at the tabernacle this even ing, to which all are invited

The Grand Lodge was organized 34 years ago, and to day there are 225 sub ordinate lodges in Illinois with a total lodges have been instituted since last September. The principal planks in the constitution of the order are total abstinence and the last september of the las constitution of the order are total abstinence and prohibition. Mr. Copp decided six years ago that any member who refused to vote against license when the issue was equarely made violated his obligation. This is the fourth time the Grand Lodge has convened in Decatur—the first in 1361, the second in 1867, the third in 1876, and the present session. third in 1870, and the present session makes the fourth. The order has expenenced a back set in its growth the past year, owing to the bitterness engendered by the late presidential campaign and its outcome Some lodges have surrendered their charters, and not as many new ones have been organized during the past 12 a new two story brick store building, to months as in former years. Presidential Decision Which Reminded the Secretary of a Story
A story is told of Judge Folger which e said to have happened at one of the Cabinet meetings at the White House President Aithur it appears wanted a to the surprising total of 91,959 In certain thing done. I forget what it all probability the authorities have had was. It is not material, anyway. He until lately a careless system of investi had laid out his plars considered the subject oarefully taken the advice of liberal margin for this, however there competent persons, was sure that what be was about to do was right and has claimed and is claiming an increas simply wanted to submit the whole ing number of victims. The ruce of matter to his Cabinet, so as to be able his inn at a greater pace than it was. to say if possible that he had their support. When the Cabinet set down he presented the subject to them and gave them his views. He spoke frankly and forcibly throughout. He made it appear that he had made up his mind about the matter and was going to act accordingly, whether his Cabinet agreed with him or not. As he was about to reach the close of his remarks about to reach the close of his remarks the went through the form of asking. he went through the form of asking the advice of his Calunet and wound up by saying . Gentlemen what is your opinion on Nobody answered Frelinghuyson looked at Brewster Lincoln frowned inquiringly at Teller Chandler wiped his everglasses and Gresham stroked his beard Tinally Polger who had been quietly subbing his chin in a corner of the room, returned to the table 'That reminds me of a story," he Everybody looked at him That reminds me of a story, repeated Judge Folger There was a traveled extensively in Europe He con sidered himself a composseur of pictures and his collection which it had taken him years of toil and labor to bring to gether, was the special object of his care and attention. He delighted in showing it to his acquaintances in fact, on every possible occasion he in vited their criticism of it. One day a friend called whose opinion about the collection he was particularly anxious to know. He had heard that his friend was considered an art critic of the first order After dinner then he led him into the gallery They passed from picture to picture the host explaining he merit of each the time and cir cumstances under which it was bought nd so on He considered this and that picture very fine, in fact the whole collection. But he invited his friend to express openly and without reserve his opinion. Do you know he said tutning suddenly to his visitor, that man Brown was here, the other day and would you believe it he had the impudence, when I asked him what he thought of my pictures to tell me they were mere daubs not worth the canvas they were painted on and to use similar expressions of appreciation felt like kicking him lown those stairs and mopping his excited blow the host once more asked his visitor. Now, what do you think of my collection?" Here Judge Folger stopped. The members of the Cablnet sat quiet and looked rather embarrassed for a few moments The President colored slightly, but said nothing Finally Frolinghuysen smile lin a careful and diplomatic manner, Brewster raised his full sleeve to but the hat behind which he was concouling a horrid grin, which he was concouling a horrid grin, Chandler's eyes twinked with merriment through his glasses. Gresham's mouth twitched, Lincoln relaxed his stern and forbidding features, and Teller ian his hand ever his laughing countenance. The President joined good naturedly in the laugh at his own expense and the meeting broke un without further business having been trunsacted. The rubject which the President had broached that day was

INSANITY its Increase in the United States—Astonishing Figures

States during recent years is quite numaring One is inclined to doubt whether the figures given can possibly be correct, but they are officially authenticated Statistics show that in 1865 the number of insane people in the States was 24,042, a small percentage In its years the number reached 37. 432 and in 1880 the figures had grown beems reason to believe that insanity and the prescurous greater in conse quence Many organizations give way under the strum It is said that the merease has been most rapid in the and though this is far from a subject tot jest it may be wondered whether if the proportion is maintained it will not soon be necessary to calculate the small percentage of inhabitants of the Western States who retain their samity -London Standard His Retiring Disposition

Apropos of General Grant's retiring disposition, the following is related in the Chicago Inter Ocean I remember well the morning that he made his first appearance in Washington He had been called there to take commain my town once, whom I knew well who had a collection of pictures of which he was very proud He will a man of calture and means. He had a man of calture and means He had a man of calture and means. He had a man of calture and means He had a man of calture and means. in the dining room at Willard's It so happened that there was only one per son in that dining room who recog nized Lim when he came in. Grant had walked quietly to the table and was in his seat before this gentleman saw him. The moment he did spe him this gortleman arose and said Ladies and gentlemen, we are in the present of Lloutenant General Grant stantly all the people at the tables were on their feet. At that time Washing ton people were used to the other style of military man and naturally thought that Grant had pride enough in his own achievements to be pleased at any recognition of them by the people who admired him. But as the clamor of enthusiasm arose in that dining room there crept over Grant's face such a look of disappointment and distress that those pearest him were discon certed He acknowledged the compliment paid him in a quiet way that seemed to the Washingtonians very much like indifference but I think he never for zave, the man who called the attention of the people to him while he was at breakfast
